Dear Mr. Neradko:

Thank you for your April 24 letter commemorating the 75th Anniversary of the Allied victory in the Great Patriotic War. The Soviet Union bore an unimaginable human toll during the war and due to the resilience of its people and cooperation with its allies, celebrated a great triumph on Victory Day.

Due to the COVID-19 emergency, I understand that the celebration of this momentous event was postponed until June 24, on which I hope you have a successful and safe celebration. On this 75th anniversary, we all remember the sacrifices that were made, recognize and honor those who lost their lives, and remain grateful for the Allied victory that ended the war.

The United States and the Russian Federation/Soviet Union have a long-standing productive relationship in aviation that continues to this day through the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Air Transport Agency. This has been evident in the recent deliveries of vital medical equipment to support the fight against COVID-19. I look forward to our continued joint efforts in aviation and international cooperation on future projects.

Thank you again for your kind letter, and I look forward to meeting you in the future.

Sincerely,

Steve Dickson
Administrator
